

Kangaroo carry

Right from the beginning

The kangaroo carry is a binding variant that is not pre-tied but tied with your baby. Thus, the sling will fit you and your baby perfectly.

1

Unfold the sling on your arm. The centre markers (stork labels) are on your shoulder and on your hand respectively.

2

Gather the sling in the direction of your wrist to a rope

3

and place it in your hand.

4

Guide the rope over one shoulder to your back and pay attention that the centre marking is in the area of your belly button.

5

6

Now place the rope on the other shoulder. Maintain the centre of the sling in the area of your belly button

7

thus forming a "U".

8

Now grab the upper edge of the rope

9 and form a pouch.

10

Let this pouch simply collapse.

11

Place your baby on your shoulder using the "safety grip".

12

The "safety grip" should look like this from the side. >

13

Now let your baby slide from your shoulder into the pouch

14

and guide his/her feet from below.

15

The bum of your baby should be in the area of your belly button.

16

Pull the upper edge of the pouch to the ears of your baby.

17

Pull the sheet of the lower edge of the pouch between you and your child so that the sling shows no folds in the back of your baby.

18

One hand supports your baby. The other hand grabs the upper edge of the pouch and twists it on your shoulder (here: brown edge).

19

20

Thus, a little sleeve is produced.

21

Repeat this on the other shoulder

22

and build another sleeve.

23

Now grab with one hand to your back and get the opposite sheet below the second sheet to the front.

24

Place the fabric sheet on your forearm so that the upper edge – in this case, the brown edge – lies in your hand.

25

Hold the first fabric sheet tightly at the front and repeat this step on you back with the second sheet.

26

Both fabric sheets are now on your forearms. Grab in one of these sheets from below, gather the sling bit by bit downwards and then take it in the other hand. Repeat this step with the other sheet.

27

Alternatively, you can clamp the first fabric sheet between your knees

28 and then gather the other rope with both hands bit by bit. >

29

The gathered fabric forms a rope

30

which you will now clamp between your knees.

31

Now gather the second fabric bit by bit with both of your hands.

32

Now take one rope in one hand each.

33

Below the bum and above the legs of your baby

34

tie a flat knot

35

which should look like that.

36

Now pull the edges of the same colour to get out unnecessary fabric of the knot.

37

Now grab the lower legs of your baby

38

and once again squat your baby properly so that his/her bum is lower than his/her knees.

39

If the sheets are still much longer than half your thighs

40

once again tie the sheets with a double knot on your back.

41

42

This is what a properly tied kangaroo carry looks like. •
